This beautifully designed anthology explores the lives and works of people from ethnic and religious minorities at New College, Oxford. Theirs is a perspective worth sharing: it is their testimony; we are here to tell their stories. First conceived by the JCR, this book was developed by the BAME subcommittee, and funded from Warden Smith's benefaction. Exploring themes of alienation and acceptance, the thrill of success and the pain of failure, the pressures of living abroad, and the strain of being so close to home, it places their voices and stories at the centre of the narrative. The individual testimonies are as diverse as they are.
